Special classification for special types of material:

--Microforms: UBC has a special AW schedule for these.

--Bibliographies: For general bibliography, national bibliography (output of a country regardless of topic) and for personal bibliography (lists of works by or about an individual) UBC follows LC.

For topical bibliographies, UBC uses the LC alternative topical classification no (i.e. not the LC Z... number). "Compound Z" classification has been discontinued.

-- Children's literature: UBC-V will accept LC classification for all works of children's literature except the following PZ 7 situations:

1. If UBC-V has established a PZ 7 cutter number for an author, we continue to use our cutter.
2. If a PZ 7 book is an English language picture book of 32 pages or fewer it shall be classified in the local PZ 4.9 classification.

--Sound recordings in the Wilson and Music collections: UBC will use a modified version of the Music Library's local sound recording classification system for both collections.

--New editions: In the case of non-literary works, LC-assigned classification numbers (that do not fall into the exception areas described in this document) are to be accepted even though this may mean not keeping editions together.

--Literature: UBC's policy continues to classify literary works by an individual author together, and different editions of a literary work together. (This sometimes involves ignoring the call number assigned in a source record). Current policies continue concerning when to revise existing literary works (see Technical Note 96-0001).

--Books in series. For series new to UBC, monographic treatment should be given to unnumbered series, and LC's treatment decision from authority records (not bib records) should be followed for numbered series. Next choice should be LAC's treatment. If no LC authority and no LAC treatment can be found, or a choice is given, a treatment decision should be referred to the appropriate cataloguing liaison librarian for the branch involved.
